

Grady-White 330 Express

2001–Current

Grady-White has long specialized in building quality small- and medium-sized outboard fishing boats, but until the advent of the 330 Express in 2002 their largest offering had been a 30-footer. This new 330 Express is good news for a lot of Grady-White owners looking to move up to a larger boat, but she's not a cheap date. Fitted out with an extensive list of standard equipment—including air-conditioning, a hardtop, and a generator—the 330 is a superb, if not fast, offshore fishing machine. Her upscale midcabin interior sports such luxuries as a teak-and-holly cabin sole, a built-in entertainment center, a teak dinette table, and a full galley. With a wide 11'7" beam, there's plenty of fishing space in the cockpit, which comes with a big 270-gallon fish box at the transom, bait-rigging station, and 45-gallon livewell forward. Comfortable lounge seats surround the bridge deck helm with its very slick electrically operated pop-up electronics console. Additional features include a bow pulpit, a VacuFlush marine head, Corian counters, and two foredeck cabin hatches. Yamaha 250s reach 35+ knots top. Note that the transom was beefed up in 2009 to handle the bigger Yamaha 350s (40+ knots max).
